

ENGLISH AND FOREIGN LANGUAGES
ENGL 1233 English Composition II
Official Syllabus

Catalog Description

This course includes study and practice in the critical reading and effective writing of argumentative and expository prose, with an emphasis on the documented paper. A research paper is required.

Prerequisite: ENGL1133

Credit Hours: 3

Intended Learning Outcomes

Students who successfully complete this course will:

1. Demonstrate skill in various forms of nonfiction composition: argument, exposition, essay exam, and narration and description.
2. Analyze and evaluate the content, structure, and style of the writing of published authors, including scholarly prose.
3. Increasingly engage in critical and creative thinking and apply these skills in writing and reading.
4. Conduct research leading to the discovery of reliable and reputable primary and secondary source materials.
5. Blend research, interpretation, and opinion via the composition process.
6. Understand effective structure and development of a research paper, including proper citation and documentation of sources.
7. Advantageously use current computer technology, database, and online technology in the research process.
8. Use current computer technology to properly format and document papers according to MLA style.
9. Exhibit increased confidence and a positive attitude toward the writing process and toward themselves as writers.